ACROSS THE BORDER.

Mirror of Events Transpiring in the Neighboring Republic.

Guadalajara Times: Mr. William R. Ramsdell left Nogales, Arizona, last Wednesday en route to Guadalajara, via Tepic. He will inspect his Tepic mining properties before coming to this city.

Chihuahua Enterprise: There are other things besides a revolution to worry about in these days of rising temperature—the wood problem—and it is causing the poor downtrodden housewife who has to get up early a mornings to make the fire to heat up the house, a whole lot of concern. If relief does not come soon it is reported that not a few industrious better halves will commence to break up expensive furniture to keep the stove going. Wood was so scarce during the early part of the week that it jumped in price to 22 pesos a cord.

Mexican Herald: Officers of the federal garrison at Chihuahua are reported to have stated that the federals and other government forces in Chihuahua at present number more than 11,000 men including all branches of the service. The artillery force has been out down during the past few weeks, but generally has been replaced with either infantry or cavalry. A large percentage of the forces in the north consists of recruits who have not seen active service yet, but it is thought that these will be of service in protecting the larger towns from possible attack.

Mexican Herald: The strike of stevedores and longshoremen at Veracruz has ended satisfactorily to the terminal company according to news which reached the capital yesterday. No increase was given the men and work was resumed on all but the fiscal wharf with a full force. Much loss has been caused to business in the capital due to the strike. This has been due in some cases to perishable goods but for the most part to holiday goods which will reach the capital too late to catch the Christmas trade. As some of these shipments were ordered expressly for that trade it will be a dead investment until next year.

Chihuahua Enterprise: The volunteer soldiers guarding the destinies of the Santa Eulalia camp are ever alert for danger. On Thursday morning one of their number doing scout duty on one of the hills adjoining the camp rushed up to one of the officers all flushed and excited, exclaiming: "the rebels are coming." That was enough. The volunteers piled out of the hay in short order, shouldered arms and marched in the direction of the enemy. A short distance from town a large column of armed and determined men were seen. "It was the enemy." They fired. The battle waged for an hour or more until the heavy fog which enveloped the city and the mountains, lifted and then it was discovered that the enemy was a body of federal soldiers. The casualties amounted to two good horses killed.

Mexican Herald: The disappearance of monuments from the several cemeteries of the capital was called to the attention of the police some time ago. Although it was thought from the start that these disappearances were simple thefts and that sooner or later the lost statuettes would show up and furnish a clue, none of them had been found, until yesterday. Two of the missing monuments were discovered by secret agents of the police in a carpet store in the city and the owner of the shop interrogated as to where they came from. He denied any knowledge of them and said that they had been left with him to be taken care of until called for, by two men whom he did not know. A close watch was kept on the store and soon two men entered who were pointed out as the culprits. They were at once arrested and sent to Belem.

Chihuahua Enterprise: Everything is all wrong with the Northwestern railroad. On Monday rebels held up freight trains loaded with provisions, clothing and cattle; confiscated the clothing and provisions, turned the cattle loose in an adjoining pasture and then they destroyed the cars. Afterwards they "borrowed" the engine and made pleasure trips up and down the line burning in all 27 bridges. According to a cattleman who arrived from out around the Corralitos district where the depredations were committed, the rebels are in high glee and most of them are obeying the strictest dictates of fashion by wearing the most expensive suits and overcoats which they secured from one of the cars of a train they commandeered. Several, it is said, are wearing high silk hats and affecting canes instead of rifles. If this be true Broadway in Gotham has nothing on Corralitos.
